Did you know?

We offer a 10% discount on parts to members of the Australian Caravan Club (ACC).

The ACC offers its members a range of benefits and is a National voice for caravanners and camper trailer owners. Members enjoy great social activities with local branches, advice and help on caravaning matters from the ACC Technical advisor, Seminars on a large variety of topics, a first class insurance scheme with additional benefits for ACC members.

The ACC is managed for the members by a board of directors who are all volunteers and dedicated caravanners themselves. And that isn't the end of the list! For more details and for information on how to join, visit the Australian Caravan Club at: <http://www.australiancaravanclub.com.au/>

Weight Distribution Hitches ~ Do I need one?

You should consider a weight distribution hitch when your trailer and your tow vehicle are not sitting level when connected to one another.

If the weight of your trailer pushes your vehicle down, or there is too little weight causing your trailer to sit up too far, this will greatly affect the steering and braking control of your front axle which can be very dangerous. A Weight distribution hitch equalises the weight between the axles of the trailer and the rear axle of your vehicle. This provides you with a safe, stable and smooth towing ride.

There are a number of styles and brands available for you to choose from. One style is the Coast Equaliser kit, the head fits underneath your tow ball and has either 2 or 4 bars that fit into the Head. The bars then sit into a bracket fixed onto your draw bar. These systems are suitable for lighter vans and camper trailers.

These kits are available in a 2 bar, which will cater for tow ball weights up to 70Kg, and the 4 Bar Kit which will cater for tow ball weights up to 125Kg.

If your tow ball weight is greater than these, you will need a system like the Hayman Reese or EAZ Lift WDH. We have the EAZ Lift systems available as they are great quality and value for money.

The EAZ Lift WDH has been the most popular system (and first patented) in North America, and has been redeveloped for Australia. The EAZ Lift features bolt together tow ball mounts that are completely adjustable for changing tow ball height and angles to suit your applications. They also feature the ability to add sway control bars should you need them later for added towing comfort and safety. We have had very positive feedback from our customers who are using the EAZ Lift, they are an easy to use, sturdy setup, and being adjustable means there is a WDH and shank combination to suit everyone.

EAZ Lift 600 Series ~ For tow ball weights up to 272Kg, shank available separately.

EAZ Lift 800 Series ~ For tow ball weights up to 363Kg, shank available separately.

INTRODUCING THE POWERHAND

Have you ever struggled to undo wheel nuts that are just too tight?

This unique tool can create up to 650Nm by simply pulling up on the handle meaning that you are able to undo the tightest wheel nut easily and safely. The ratchet mechanism means that you can use the PH650 to take the wheel nuts off once they are loose with out the use of a wheel brace and the flat end of the stabilising bar can be used to remove hub caps.

The Powerhand is simple and safe to operate, no need for wheel braces or other tools. The Powerhand is maintenance free, compact and light.

Sphere Platinum Frequently Asked Questions

Will I be able to receive the new Free-to-air channels that are available in my local area with this TV?

Yes, the Sphere Platinum range of LCD TV's include an integrated HD digital tuner.

About 2yrs ago, I purchased a large flat screen TV for home that didn't have an inbuilt digital tuner—I then had to upgrade with the addition of an external set top box to be able to receive the current digital broadcast. Is this Platinum TV safeguarded against any future updates or broadcast changes?

Yes, the Sphere Platinum range of LCD TV's can decode the current MPEG2-HD & future H264/MPEG4-HD AVC formats. So once more channels are released, you will have access to these as well.

How is this TV powered?

The Sphere Platinum range of LCD TV's have been designed for RV use, so it includes a 12V DC power cable that connects to your 12V socket in your RV. Should you be in an RV park (or at home) & wish to run the TV from 240V AC, simply use the 240V power adapter that is supplied.

Can this TV be used as a computer monitor whilst travelling or at home?

Yes the Sphere Platinum TV's have a monitor audio input so a laptop or desktop computer can be connected with ease.

Can I connect a gaming machine or an HD device to this TV?

Yes, there are several inputs/outputs, like HDMI, component, composite & S-Video/

I would like to record digital TV while I am on holidays so that I don't miss my favourite TV shows, do I need a DVD/HDD recorder unit?

No, the Sphere Platinum range of LCD TV's has a composite AV output that can be connected to your DVD/HDD recorder unit—though you can take advantage of the Platinum inbuilt recording system. To do this, simply plug in a USB flash drive or portable hard drive & and you can record directly to the device.

What size USB/HDD should I use if I want to use the record option on the TV?

The Sphere Platinum range of LCD TV's can work with sizes from 1GB to 1TB. Keeping in mind that the USB port has a limited power output, meaning drives of approx 320GB-5020Gb that are USB powered are most suitable. The bigger the drive the more power it requires, so extra power supply cable may be required for the larger drives of up to 1TB to operate correctly.

Can I connect this TV to other TV's that I have in my RV?

Yes, because the Sphere Platinum range of LCD TV's have composite (yellow/white/red) AV outputs you can use one TV as your master TV and have other TV's in your RV connected as screens only. This is great for when friends and family are over, you're able to have a movie playing inside the RV on the master TV and have an outside TV playing the same movie.

What warranty is offered with the Platinum range of LCD TV's?

The Platinum range of TV's are covered by a 1yr manufacturers warranty which includes a "zero bright pixel" guarantee.
